Few places on earth can match the stunning natural setting of Wilderness Lodge Lake Moeraki. New Zealand's premier nature lodge is surrounded by ancient rainforest on the shores of the Moeraki River, just a short walk from the Tasman Sea.

Owned and operated by renowned conservationists Anne Saunders and Dr Gerry McSweeney, the lodge is a paradise for nature lovers and those wanting to experience wild New Zealand. An exciting programme of guided nature discovery is complemented by stylish accommodation, fine food and warm wilderness hospitality.

Complimentary and charged guided activities introduce guests to the area's remarkably diverse plants, animals and landscapes. Join naturalist guides to hike wilderness beaches, explore jungle-like rainforests, kayak and search for penguins, seals and other wildlife. Self-guided hiking, kayaking and brown trout fishing are also available.

Midway between the West Coast Glaciers and Wanaka/Queenstown, Wilderness Lodge Lake Moeraki is an oasis of comfort in the heart of Te Wahipounamu World Heritage Area.
